Winning entries will be selected at random and winners must be able to pick up their watch at the Crow Collection of Asian Art.

Alexander Gorlizki: Variable Dimensions is a site-specific installation featuring paintings, sculptures, video, and the applied arts—carpets, wallpapers, textiles—for a rich kaleidoscopic experience. Rick Brettell with The Dallas Morning News said of the exhibition, “The very diversity of the works and their technical mastery is unusual in a work by a single artist, who becomes at once a cultural chameleon and an enchanter.”

With works of art as diverse as embroidered handkerchiefs and plant-like hand-mirrors alongside exquisitely crafted paintings with obsessive floral and geometric patterns, most familiar in the Islamic arts, this exhibition is rich with inspiration. Alexander Gorlizki: Variable Dimensions is on view to the public through March 20, 2016 in the museum's Garden Gallery on level one. You may also play in person at the museum by submitting your contact info at the Lotus Shop. The Crow Collection of Asian Art is open Tuesdays – Thursdays (10 a.m. – 9 p.m.), Fridays – Saturdays (10 a.m. – 6 p.m.), Sundays (12 p.m. – 6 p.m.) and closed on Mondays. Admission is free. For contest rules details and disclaimers, please go to crowcollection.org or call 214-979-6430.
